Oakbrook, IL - 1888 Mills, LLC a global home textile manufacturing company, has broadened the reach of its Kitchen Textile product category, with the introduction of Clorox® FreshCare™ Towels, now available at Wal-Mart and rolling out to other retailers for Spring 2009.

Clorox® FreshCare™ Towels, are powered by HaloShield™ technology, a patented coating that binds household bleach to textiles made of cotton. The HaloShield™ coating, combined with the power of Clorox® Regular-Bleach inhibits the growth of odor-causing bacteria on the towel or dishcloth. Antimicrobial protection of the towel is reactivated every time the product is washed with Clorox® Regular-Bleach and lasts the lifetime of the product.

"1888 Mills is proud to partner with Clorox, a leading consumer brand in Home Care products. We believe that the Clorox® brand combined with Halo Shield™ technology gives the consumer a timely and unique attribute that clearly fits our brand purpose of Weaving a Better World,™" states Fulton Allen, President of 1888 Mills Consumer Products Division.

"The Clorox Company is very pleased that 1888 Mills will be manufacturing and offering Clorox® FreshCare™ Kitchen Towels with HaloSource's proprietary antimicrobial technology.", says Steven Silberblatt, VP New Business Development, The Clorox Company. "We think consumers will find these towels offer great performance and quality, consistent with what they expect from products bearing the Clorox® name."
